ICE AGE DISCOVERY

In October 2010, a bulldozer operator working near Snowmass Village uncovered the tusk of a young female mammoth. Over the next 10 months the Denver Museum of Nature and Science conducted its largest-ever fossil excavation yielding a treasure of well-preserved Ice Age fossils.

This discovery led to the finest alpine Ice Age fossil trove in the world, Colorado's most important fossil discovery ever and the largest discovery of mastodons (35) in the world.
